Canceling sales like there's no tomorrow. Going through a foreclosure? Then the headline of a canceled foreclosure sale doesn't sound like a bad thing. Unfortunately, that's not what we're talking about. Imagine this: you gave your 30-day notice to your landlord, because you just negotiated a killer deal on your dream home, a foreclosed property. You got a super deal. You're... [\[Read more...\]](#)

WTF is Schwarzenegger thinking! He vetoed SB1178.

WTF is Schwarzenegger thinking! He vetoed SB 1178. I think he needs a dose of his medicine and get some veto therapy. On Thursday, Governor Schwarzenegger vetoed SB 1178 (Corbett), C.A.R.'s sponsored bill that would have expanded anti-deficiency protections. In his veto message, the Governor made clear his view that the bill interferes with an existing contract. While disappointed in the Governor's... [\[Read more...\]](#)

According to my state of the art Calendar Calculator Gizmo 3000, that was well over a year ago. That same calendar stated that the national unemployment increased from 9.5% in June 2009 to 10.1% in October... [\[Read more...\]](#)

Sorry, It's Too Late to Panic Now.

Yup, there was some dismal news in the housing market today. Housing sales in July 2010 dropped 25.5 percent below July 2009 sales. That's not so hot, especially when we're trying to get into recovery mode. It's the lowest volume of home sales in 15 years! So with all this doom and gloom, time to avoid real estate, right? Time to panic and start unloading your investments? Head to the hills and... [\[Read more...\]](#)

This bill extends anti-deficiency protections to homeowners who refinanced their mortgages, but didn't take any cash out, and are now facing foreclosure. Ok, in plain english: Most people don't realize, that when they've refinanced their existing mortgage to get a lower... [\[Read more...\]](#)
